For the Dispatch. The Statut Mater.

The author of this hymn, Jacopone da Todi (sometimes called Benedetto and Jacobus de Benedictis), was born at Todi, in Umbria, of a noble family, in the early part of the thirteenth century. The date is unknown. Of his Latin poems, only three are preserved. He died in 1306. His epitaph (1596) reads : "Ossa B. Jacoponi de Benedictis, Tudertini, qui stultus propter Christum, nova mundum arte delusit, et coclum rapuit."-French. "The Stabat Maker is the most pathetic, as the Dies Irre is the most sublime, hymn of the middle ages, and occupies the second rank in Latin hymnology."-Schaff. It has furnished the text for many renowned musical compositions, among which the best known are those of Palesbrina, Pergolesi, and Haydn. There is a literature of essays and critical discussions of the history, authorship, and of a hasty agreement, repaired to his midmerits of the poem .- March's Latin Hymns.]

A NEW TRANSLATION,

Near the cross, O love amazing !
Stood the mother, tearful, gazing
On the form now growing cold,
Through her soul in angulsh groaning,
Saddened, wrung with sorest mouning,
Pierced the sword, long years forctoid.

Oh! how sorrowful, heart-riven, Oh! how sickening, sait that grieving
Oh! how sickening, sait that grieving
O'er the pain there's no relieving,
Mother of the spotless one! III.

Who could see that mother tender, Bowed to earth by pangs that rend her, And not share her speechless woe? Who, but feel his own heart languish, To behold that mother's anguish, More intense at every throe? VI.

Jesus on the rack enduring. Every scourge of malice proving, For the race he came to save; Him she saw by triends forsaken, When in darkling gloom o'ertaken, Fled his soul to God who gave.

Mother, fount of love, imbue me, With thy tenderness endac me, That thy sorrows may be mine. Make my heart glow warm adoring, God's anointed son imploring, That I share his love divine. Brand my heart, O holy mother,

Till I all its pangs may suffer. With the image of the cross Of his wounds grant me a porti Who has paid for my redemption Ransom of a bleeding corse. VII. With the Crucified to suffer,

With the Cruelled to suffer, With thy tears mine own to offer, Grant me till this breath depart. I would e'er abide on Calvary; Close by thee I would share every Yearning of thy plaintive heart. VIII.

Thou of virgins most availing,
Make me partner of thy walling;
Turn not bitterly away.
Let me, while on earth I tarry,
Jesus's dying body carry; Make my heart Gethsemane.

Let me with His stripes be wounded: Let me drink with thirst unbounded Calviry's blood, poured out for me. Then unto the judgment coming, May I thus with fervor glowing. Find an advocate in Thee.

With the cross of Jesus shield me, By His death-wounds, Virgin, heal me. strengthen me with saving grace, And at last, by sorrow afted, May my soul, in death unlifted, Find in Paradise a place.
